

Please join us for our inaugural workshop:

PRODUCT LABELING, TERRITORIAL DISPUTES, AND INTERNATIONAL TRADE AFTER THE ECJ'S PSAGOT RULING

With opening remarks by former Ambassador to the EU Stuart Eizenstat

The European Court of Justice recently ruled that Israeli products from the West Bank and Golan Heights must have origin labelling that declares their provenance as being from "settlements" in "occupied territory." This workshop seeks to examine the labelling requirements from an international trade law perspective. Does international trade law require labelling of goods from occupied territories? If so, what other territories might such requirements apply to? What are the consequences of the EU limiting its "ethical" labelling requirements to Israeli-controlled territories?

Speakers

Professor Brenda Shaffer, "Not drinking alone: EU policy toward products produced in settlements in occupied territories in the former Soviet space," Georgetown University

Olga Kanevskaia, "Broadening the scope of technical barriers to trade: the Psagot cases," Tilburg University

Professor Steve Charnovitz, "The International Economic Law of Product Labeling," The George Washington University Law School

Professor Juscelino Colares, "Consistently Inconsistent: How EU 'Ethical' Labeling of Israeli Imports Violates GATT's Most-Favored Nation Principle," Case Western Reserve Law School

The event will be moderated by Professor Eugene Kontorovich, Director of CILME.
